A HISTORY OF Trailblazers
A BISON’S TALE
My name is Brooks! ... and I have an amazing story to tell you about what it means to be a Trailblazer!

There are tons of ways you can be a Trailblazer!

By the way, before you move on, make sure to read the definition on the left.
You see, my ancestors have been blazing trails for thousands of years.

Before roads and highways existed, herds of stampeding bison created trails all over North America.

THAT BISON UP FRONT IS MY GREAT-GREAT-GRANDDAD BERNARD. HEY, GRAMPS!
Native Americans adopted the bison trails for warpaths and hunting grounds, and pioneers used the trails to migrate across the country.

The bison even paved the way for the first railroad system!
Like my bison ancestors, pioneers blazed trails to Washington County and became TRAILBLAZERS in education, farming, water systems, and more.

By trying new things, the pioneers created better lives for themselves and future generations.

YOU CAN BE A TRAILBLAZER, TOO!
The early settlers valued education and started the first college in the region, St. George Stake Academy, now Dixie State University.

The night before its opening, Samuel Brooks slept on the school steps, eagerly awaiting the chance to be Dixie’s first student.
Dixie State University was built to surround the Pioneer Encampment Mall – the exact location the pioneers camped when arriving in the valley.

Today, Dixie State University students, teachers, staff, and alumni blaze trails in medicine, technology, education, business, the arts, and so much more!
Dixie State University is a special place where students come to discover their passions and make the world a better place by trailblazing in many ways, just like my ancestors did so many years ago!
